Standing Up Against Cancer

New FF Presumption Bill Builds on CPF Legacy of Leadership

Firefighters take the job knowing that the next major fire call could put their lives at risk. But there is another, silent threat to which first responders are exposed every day: the slow-motion risk of job-related cancer.

For three decades, California Professional Firefighters has led the fight to recognize the increased job-related risks faced by first responders, beginning with the nation’s first cancer presumption law, signed in 1982 by Jerry Brown.

This year, that legacy continues with the introduction of AB 2253, the William Dallas Jones Memorial Cancer Presumption Act of 2010.

“As firefighters, we know that even a single incident, or a seemingly minor call, can produce exposures that could, ultimately, claim our lives,” said CPF President Lou Paulson. “This legislation will help protect the family of every firefighter whose life may be cut short by these silent killers.”

AB 2253, authored by Assemblyman Joe Coto (D-San Jose), protects firefighters’ cancer presumption for up to 15 years after his or her retirement. The current statute of limitations only extends to five years after his or her retirement. Firefighter presumption laws require that employers provide appropriate disability and workers’ compensation benefits to first responders, who become ill or die as a result of specified job-contracted illnesses or injuries. Employers can only deny coverage if they can conclusively prove that the illness or injury is not job related.

“From the beginning, presumption laws have protected firefighters and families victimized by job-related illness,” said Paulson. “Instead of the firefighter having to prove that the illness is job related, management has to prove that it isn’t.”

Every year, the California Firefighters Memorial adds the names of anywhere from 10 to 30 firefighters who have lost their lives to cancer contracted on the job. Usually, it is the result of consistent exposure to carcinogenic chemicals over the course of a career. In some cases, a single incident can produce the exposure that triggers job-related illness.

Building solid protection for firefighters has been a central focus of California Professional Firefighters. CPF sponsored the nation’s first firefighter cancer presumption law, signed in 1982 by then-Gov. Jerry Brown. Over the years, CPF has won additional presumptions for heart, TB, meningitis, biochemical exposure and, most recently, MRSA.

The new proposal, which is working its way through the Legislature, is named for the late CPF Secretary-Treasurer Dallas Jones. A giant of the firefighter labor movement, Jones lost his own battle with job-related cancer in 2008.

Keep track of AB 2253, and all of CPF’s priority legislation, by checking the “Issues and Legislation” section at www.cpf.org.

Three Decades of Progress

CPF’s Firefighter Presumption Legislation

The first workers’ comp presumption laws in California were passed in the 1930s, and covered hernia, pneumonia and “heart trouble.” However, it has been in the last 30 years that California firefighters have enjoyed the full protection of firefighter presumption laws.

I want to thank you and your staff for selecting one of my images for the first place award for the CPF Photo Contest. I have already put the money to good use, helping to restore a radio repeater that emergency photographers use in Southern California as well as fixing several pieces of photographic equipment that I damaged on the Station wildfire.

I am glad that many of the images that I submitted to you can be used to further our great profession and to promote our motto of "Honor, Respect and Devotion to Duty." The fire service is coming under attack with huge budget shortfalls and I hope that the compelling images can be used to fire back at people who want to downsize our most noble profession.

As you may know, I am continuing to publish Southern California Fire Journal and am working on a documentary regarding the Station wildfire. It has been a long and tedious task but I am finally making progress and your award money helped to alleviate some serious financial burdens that I have.

Please extend my most sincere thank you to all of your wonderful staff and let them know that I am truly honored that you selected one of my images for the award. I will continue to strive to photograph as much as possible for the award. I will continue to strive to promote our motto of "Honor, Respect and Devotion to Duty." The fire service is coming under attack with huge budget shortfalls and I hope that the compelling images can be used to fire back at people who want to downsize our most noble profession.

Thanks again!

Fraternally,

Jeff Zimmerman

Appreciation for the Pipes and Drums

On behalf of the family of Richard "Chip" Smith, and the Ontario Fire Department, I'd like to thank you for the CPF Pipes and Drums participation at Battalion Chief Smith's Memorial Service on Saturday, February 27th. As you know, this service had to come together in a short period of time, and your team's responsiveness was remarkable.

We estimated that over 900 persons attended Chip's service. The Pipes and Drums portion was nothing short of incredible. Over and over again, I heard attendees speak of the heartfelt emotions generated by the sounds of Pipes and Drums.

Rest assured that Chip's wife Amanda, and his daughters Colleen and Shannon, will remember the performance that day forever. Thanks again for your assistance, and please pass on our appreciation to your Pipes and Drums Band.

Sincerely,

David A. Carrier
Fire Chief
City of Ontario Fire Department

A Tribute to Jim Perry

Thank you for your financial assistance, as well as for your moral support with Jim Perry's memorials.

We lost a dear friend and labor brother and these memorials were a fitting tribute to a great man.

Sincerely,

Firefighters Stay Informed with CPF Firevision

Firefighters are getting more news that matter to them in minutes, courtesy of CPF Firevision.

Since CPF Firevision launched in January, the online news service has reported on issues affecting our profession, like the re-introduction of the Emergency Response Initiative, the California Firefighters Memorial Ceremony and pension-slashing measures. The work of locals has also been spotlighted ranging from Alameda County's Fire Ops to LA County Firefighters' relief work in Haiti. One groundbreaking episode was dedicated entirely to the 2010 pension fight.

Each video update averages only five minutes and can be viewed on a computer or cell phone. Free downloads are available on the CPF Web site, YouTube, iTunes, Facebook and Twitter. A new episode is posted the second and fourth Wednesday of every month.

"CPF Firevision is great. The episodes are short, but provide an accessible way for us to reach our members and let them know what their union is doing," said Contra Costa County Fire Captain Pete Marshall, whose local has begun sending these video links to its members. "I tell folks that if they want to learn about their profession, here's a way to do it. It just makes sense."

Standing Tall … Standing Together

Forty years ago, this past April 13th, the confidence of America’s space program was shattered with a few muffled words from the cramped capsule of Apollo 13: “Houston, we’ve had a problem, here.”

The oft-misquoted phrase has become something of a cliché, used when things that seemed to be going well suddenly go wrong. But the real lesson of Apollo 13 is how, when the stakes were impossibly high, intelligence, cool-headedness, determination and teamwork brought three stranded astronauts home safely, turning tragedy into triumph.

As firefighters, we’re trained to use these qualities on the front lines. But in a time of economic upheaval, we will be called upon to show the same fortitude and common purpose as we approach what is arguably the most important and difficult election campaign in our lives.

For firefighters, the stakes in the 2010 elections have never been higher.

That we “have a problem” is beyond dispute. Public safety budgets are under unprecedented attack. Fire stations are going dark. Our brothers and sisters are being laid off. Beyond the fiscal threats, firefighters, law enforcement and other public workers have been on the business end of an unprecedented wave of vicious attacks. We’ve been targeted in hard-line management tactics and the editorial ivory towers.

Now more than ever, we need to stand with those who stand up for us, our families and the citizens we serve. This principle has been the guidepost in our endorsements for statewide and legislative contests.

WHY DO WE ENDORSE?
In making endorsements in statewide races, CPF is simply providing our members with information about the candidates that stand with us on those issues that are relevant to the lives and well-being of our members – public safety resources, retirement security, employee rights, training and protecting the families of fallen firefighters. We would not, and are not, telling our members how to vote.

WHY IT MATTERS THAT WE STAND TALL, AND STAND TOGETHER
With so much at stake for our profession, now is not the time to stand on the sidelines. If we are to protect the families we cherish, the security we’ve earned and the safety our citizens deserve, it’s imperative we answer the call in this year’s election.

I would encourage you to get informed on where the candidates stand on our issues. You can find more info in this newspaper and at www.cpf.org. Once informed, get active – your local union leadership can help.

The stakes have never been higher, and the choices have never been clearer.

The DIY Approach to Labor

I write this article to those of you in a leadership position in your local union. Because the job of union president can seem, at times, overwhelming, there is a growing trend toward delegating certain responsibilities – contract negotiations, grievance and disciplinary appeals and political actions – to outside lawyers and consultants. Recently a CPF local told me they had hired a political consultant with a choking price tag to perform what they probably could have done “in-house.”

Let me be clear. I am not advocating ignoring professional assistance where it’s appropriate. Labor attorneys and other experts are a valuable resource for us. But there’s a difference between hiring someone because you need them versus hiring them just because it’s easier. Outside consultants have value, but they should not replace our involvement.

Apprehensive about negotiating that next contract? If your union has not had a smooth leadership transition, you may feel the need to have an attorney represent you. If this is the case, then ask questions, study the methods used and take lots of notes. Use the attorney’s expertise as a teaching time for you and your team. The same strategy would apply to the filing of a PERB action or a disciplinary appeal. Pay attention with the thought that someday soon you will be doing this without help. Do not sell your abilities short. You were probably elected to office because you exhibited abilities in the various aspects of membership representation.

Believe it or not, you can also get an education from the other side. I remember sitting in the human resource manager’s office very early in my union career. He left his office, so I got up and looked at his library. It was full of various public sector labor relations periodicals and management books and other publications, none of which were Sports Illustrated. I jotted down as many of the titles as I could, got my hands on them and found them extremely valuable resources. It is like viewing the opponent’s game film, studying their tendencies and what offense they are going to run.

There are many labor relations classes outside of the fire service available to you. Ask your agency’s labor relations department where they send their employees for training. Many of those seminars are open to you, too. They are typically taught by respected attorneys retained by management. It’s like peeking behind enemy lines – a terrific learning experience and another great way to read the other side’s playbook.

There are also resources geared directly to your needs. As firefighters, we take all kinds of command classes and various certifications; everything from the methods of intubation to the burning index of a young sumac. We need to be just as diligent with our labor training. Through IAFF affiliate leadership training and CPF leadership training, you can get the tools you need to be successful.

Successful labor representatives are not afraid to spend the time sitting in classes, reading public sector labor journals, picking the brains of successful leaders and putting in the time necessary to be true advocate for your membership. It will also give you the wisdom to know when to initiate the assistance of an attorney.

I know the job can seem daunting, but the more you build your “labor I.Q.”, the better prepared you will be to face enormous challenges that lay ahead. If you’d like some additional resources, just email me at lstone@cpf.org.

AB 155 (Tony Mendoza, D-Artesia) – Authorizes a local public entity, with the approval of the California Debt and Investment Advisory Commission, to file a petition and exercise powers applicable under federal bankruptcy law. This bill assures taxpayers who rely on vital public services, as well as those who own and operate businesses, every chance to help a municipality avoid the long term devastation of bankruptcy.

AB 1651 (Hector De La Torre, D-South Gate) - Enables specified furloughed employees to accrue retirement service credit during their furloughed period, including local firefighters employed by a few jurisdictions in the state that have imposed furloughs on their fire departments. As such, the retirement of a handful of local firefighters affected by furloughs would be kept whole in a manner similar to their non-furloughed counterparts.

AB 2149 (Warren Furutani, D-Long Beach) - Strikes obsolete references to “fireman” in the County Employees’ Retirement Law of 1937 (aka ’37 Act) and instead, makes reference to “firefighter.” In doing so, this bill assists in broader efforts to ensure gender equity in the state’s county retirement law given the growing focus on recruitment and retention of women in non-traditional public safety professions, such as firefighting.

AB 2151 (Norma Torres, D-Pomona) – Ensures that a firefighter is held financially blameless if he or she is involved in an accident while operating their private vehicle at the request or direction of their employer.

AB 2153 (Joe Coto, D-San Jose) - Enacts the “William Dallas Jones Cancer Presumption Act of 2010” and in doing so, extends the existing public safety cancer presumption statute of limitations – from five to 15 years – to more accurately reflect the risk to those types of job-related cancers that are contracted by firefighters and other public safety personnel.

AB 2253 (Joe Coto, D-San Jose) - Enacts the “William Dallas Jones Cancer Presumption Act of 2010” and in doing so, extends the existing public safety cancer presumption statute of limitations – from five to 15 years – to more accurately reflect the risk to those types of job-related cancers that are contracted by firefighters and other public safety personnel.

AB 2331 (Nancy Skinner, D-Berkeley) - Amends existing law to enable the California Fire Fighter Joint Apprenticeship Committee (CFFJAC) to remove names of those firefighters who were once added to the displaced firefighting hiring list it maintains when notification is given that the firefighter has obtained new employment or been reemployed.

AB 2456 (Alberto Torrico, D-Fremont) - Clarifies existing law with respect to the Emergency Medical Service Authority’s current ability to establish guidelines that direct local EMS agencies and other essential EMS stakeholders in their operations for the coordinated delivery of emergency medical services in California.

ACA 9 (Jared Huffman, D-San Rafael) - Amends the state Constitution to change the existing two-thirds voter-approval requirement for local government special taxes to 55 percent. It also amends the state Constitution to create an additional exception to the 1% limit for a rate imposed by a city, county or special district to service bonded indebtedness to fund public service improvements, facilities or buildings that is approved by 55 percent of the voters.

SB 5 (Abel Maldonado, R-Santa Maria) - Directs the Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training to conduct a feasibility study regarding the peace officer designation of members of a fire department bomb squad unit, who are certified by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as certified bomb technicians.

Pension Initiative Pulled, But New Threats Loom

Battle for Retirement Security Moves from Ballot to Budget

First, the good news: A ballot measure that could have cut new employee retirement by as much as 50% and more will not be on the ballot this November.

The proposal, which would have imposed punitive new restrictions on retirement, health care and collective bargaining, was withdrawn after no deep pocket stepped forward to bankroll the signature gathering campaign.

The proposal was the latest in a series of attacks launched by an anti-firefighter, anti-employee organization that’s been on the attack for the better part of the last decade. Their 2005 ballot proposal – also withdrawn during signature gathering – sparked widespread condemnation for shutting off defined benefit payments to the survivors of fallen firefighters and law enforcement.

“The backers of this ill-conceived proposal didn’t learn the lessons of the 2005 campaign, but their benefactors clearly did,” said CPF President Lou Paulson, “The withdrawal of this measure is a victory for firefighters and their families.”

Now, the bad news: The battle for retirement security is far from over … in fact, it’s just beginning. Only this time, the venue isn’t the ballot box – it’s the budget process.

Local governments have made two-tiered pensions a focal point of local collective bargaining. Regional city manager organizations, with the encouragement of advocates such as the League of California Cities, have proposed “pension guidelines” that seek to impose a one-size-fits-all pension solution.

Candidates hostile to public employees – most notably former eBay CEO Meg Whitman – have proposed eliminating pensions entirely and replacing them with higher cost, higher risk retirement savings accounts.

Anti-employee, anti-union media outlets have explicitly (and inaccurately) targeted public safety retirement security as the biggest threat to long-term fiscal health for local and state government.

“We may not see retirement security on the ballot, but that doesn’t mean the issue has disappeared,” said Paulson. “You’ve earned your retirement security, but if we let down our guard now, they’ll take it away.”

What We’re Doing

California Professional Firefighters continues to work collaboratively with other labor groups in the “ground war” against steep pension rollbacks. In addition to co-chairing labor’s Californians for Health Care and Retirement Security (CHCRS), CPF has also produced an informational video on retirement security, available online at www.cpfirevision.org.

CPF has also provided local affiliate leadership with an array of public outreach tools and resources to fight back against the attacks. Participating in positive public outreach programs are the most effective counterbalance to the attacks on firefighters and public employees.

To keep current on the battle to protect your retirement security, look for Pension Updates at www.cpf.org, under “Find It Here.”

2010 PRIORITY OPPOSE BILLS

(As of April 19, 2010)

AB 1669 (Jeffries, R-Riverside) – Requires CAL FIRE to take on the expensive bureaucratic program of conducting a state and federal level criminal offender record information search that does not prove, in itself, necessary. Also, unfairly forces seasonal firefighters to pay the cost of record information only to be paid back after they have been employed 24-months accumulatively. For seasonals, who make barely more than minimum wage, the payback would take between two-and-a-half to four years.

AB 1700 (Gaines, R-Roseville) – Repeals the pending modest Vehicle License Fee (VLF) increase and in doing so, adversely impacts critically scarce taxpayer dollars.

AB 1833 (Logue, R-Chico) – Undermines worker safety by creating additional hurdles to the enactment of Cal/OSHA regulations, including the completion of an economic impact analysis of any proposed regulation -- a proposed requirement that is duplicative of existing law and not a wise use of scarce taxpayer dollars.

AB 1990 (Anderson, R-La Mesa) – Allows an income tax credit equal to 100% of the costs paid or incurred for specified contributions made toward child care and in doing so, would result in significant revenue losses that could ultimately impact revenues otherwise made available for critical firefighting and public safety services.

AB 2041 (Villines, R-Clovis) – Allows a specified income tax deduction in connection with health savings accounts (HSAs), which, aside from negatively impacting revenues otherwise made available for public safety services, does nothing to reduce the number of uninsured. HSA-compatible plans still have high premiums so these accounts really only benefit high wage earners and do nothing to make health care more affordable for the uninsured and low-income earners.

AB 2126 (Garrick, R-Carlsbad) – Reduces the existing minimum franchise tax of $800 paid by corporations, partnerships and other companies for the first 10 years they are in business and in doing so, would result in a significant loss of critical revenue to the General Fund that could otherwise be earmarked for vital firefighting and other public safety services.

AB 2539 (Smyth, R-Santa Clarita) – Similar to AB 2041, this bill allows a specified income tax deduction in connection with health savings accounts (HSAs) without demonstrating any specific economic benefits for California.

SB 1180 (Dutton, R-Inland Empire) – Depresses wages and working conditions for California workers by turning the state into a so-called “right to work” state where workers are entitled to all of the benefits of union membership, but cannot be compelled to pay their fair share for that representation, thereby weakening California unions and making it impossible for them to bargain good contracts.

SB 1262 (Aanestad, R-Grass Valley) – Requires the CalPERS’ Board of Administration to offer a high deductible health plan and a Health Savings Account option under PEMHCA to public employee and annuitant members. Similar to AB 2041 and AB 2539, this bill also allows a HSA-related income tax deduction, without demonstrating any specific economic benefits.
A Legacy of Support ... A Vision for the Future

Why CPF Endorses
Jerry Brown for Governor

Whether it’s their brothers and sisters on the front lines or their leaders in Sacramento, California’s firefighters live by a simple motto: We stand up for those who stand up with us.

As Californians, firefighters are also concerned about the direction our state is taking, and the budget challenges that threaten their lives and livelihoods.

After interviewing all of the major Republican and Democratic candidates for governor, California Professional Firefighters believes that, for firefighters and their families, the choice is clear: Attorney General Jerry Brown.

Standing Up for Firefighter Families

During his first stint as governor, from 1975 to 1983, Jerry Brown made history on behalf of California’s firefighters:

- Governor Brown signed the nation’s first firefighter cancer presumption law, the foundation of workers’ compensation protection for front line firefighters and their families;
- Governor Brown appointed the first line firefighter to serve as California State Fire Marshal, guaranteeing a voice for front line firefighters in setting state fire policy;
- Governor Brown signed the bill that created the California Fire Fighter Joint Apprenticeship Committee, the nation’s model firefighter training and recruitment organization;
- Governor Brown authorized collective bargaining for state employees, building a core protection for, among others, CAL FIRE firefighters.

“Any one of these achievements by itself would justify our support for Jerry Brown,” said CPF President Lou Paulson. “When you’re looking for a record of support, it’s hard to think of anyone else that comes close.”

Experience That Makes A Difference

When confronting the daunting challenges facing California, it helps to know what you’re doing. At nearly every level of service, Jerry Brown has been there, done that, and made a difference.

As governor, his record on behalf of firefighters and their families is clear. But Brown was also known for frugal fiscal policies and strong public safety support. As California’s attorney general, Brown has been tough on crime and cracked down on corporate irresponsibility. He has also insured balance and clarity in drafting summaries for initiatives such as those attacking retirement security and employee rights.

Sharing Our Values

Running California calls for more than just a resume. When interviewing the candidates, CPF pushed hard on the issues that will make a difference in the lives of its members: retirement security, safety on the job, collective bargaining rights and funding for state and local disaster response.

In all of these areas, Brown stood out.

- Retirement security. Brown was the only candidate who stood fast in support of a secure pension for firefighters and their families;
- Collective bargaining: Brown was the only candidate committed to working with employees through the collective bargaining process;
- Fire service resources: Brown was the only candidate who supported finding more resources to save our endangered mutual aid response.

“Jerry Brown doesn’t run down public employees ... he stands up for them,” said Paulson.

Vision for California’s Future

During his first term as governor, Chicago columnist Mike Royko dubbed Brown “Governor Moonbeam.” Why? Because Jerry Brown proposed modernizing disaster response by launching an emergency communications satellite. It turns out that “Governor Moonbeam” was ahead of his time.

“If we’re really going to fix California’s ills, we can’t settle for the same old partisan rhetoric,” said Paulson. “Jerry Brown is the original ‘outsider’. The difference is, he’s an ‘outsider’ who knows how to get things done.”

After interviewing all of the major Republican and Democratic candidates for governor, California Professional Firefighters believes that, for firefighters and their families, the choice is clear: Attorney General Jerry Brown.
After an extensive interview process, California Professional Firefighters has identified candidates it believes would be the strongest firefighter choices for statewide office in this June’s Primary Election.

“We’re proud to stand with these men and women, each of whom has a record of supporting the issues that matter to front line firefighters and their families,” said CPF President Lou Paulson. “In contests with strong pro-firefighter candidates on both sides of the aisle, CPF endorsed in both the Democratic and Republican races.”

The CPF endorsements for the primary were the product of weeks of interviews with dozens of candidates from both sides of the political aisle. Only candidates who interviewed with the CPF Executive Board were eligible for consideration. All viable major party candidates running for statewide office were invited for interviews, and every candidate who responded to our invitation was interviewed.

CPF Endorsements – Statewide Office
Bipartisan list spotlights strongest candidates on first responder issues

Candidates winning the CPF endorsement have demonstrated a commitment to public safety and California’s first responders, and earned support from CPF affiliates in their area. “Neutral” means there are more than one candidate supportive of first responders. “No Endorsement” means CPF found no firefighter-friendly candidates in the race.

CPF - Primary Endorsements 2010

Candidates winning the CPF endorsement have demonstrated a commitment to public safety and California’s first responders, and earned support from CPF affiliates in their area. “Neutral” means there are more than one candidate supportive of first responders. “No Endorsement” means CPF found no firefighter-friendly candidates in the race.

CPF found no firefighter-friendly candidates in the race.

No on Proposition 14 – Open Primary

CPF takes positions only on those ballot measures that directly affect its members and their bargaining and employee rights. Proposition 14, in our view, will simply ramp up the financial arms race in politics, making it harder for our members to participate in electing firefighter-friendly candidates to state office.

Fresno Firefighters Reach Hispanic Community Through Firefighters On Your Side

California Fire Foundation Campaign Highlights Importance of Escape Plan

n Fresno, where nearly 40 percent of residents are Hispanic, fire safety messages can get lost in translation. Firefighters still recall the story of the little girl, who was killed in a house fire in Fresno last year, because her family didn’t know the importance of smoke detectors.

“They didn’t understand the language so messages of about this important topic never reached them;” said Fresno Battalion Chief Tony Escobedo. “We want to make sure this never happens again.”

To this end, Fresno Firefighters enlisted help from Firefighters On Your Side, the program created by the California Fire Foundation, to communicate the importance of having an escape plan in Spanish and English. In February, they began saturating their community with the Spanish/English campaign “Tenga Un Plan De Escape/Have an Escape Plan.”

• Members of Local 753 and the Fresno Fire Department visited Fresno area schools to show students how to make an escape plan for their homes. Brochures were sent home with students in Spanish and English so that they could educate their families.

• Commercials in Spanish and English highlighted the need for an evacuation plan in the event of a house fire. To date, every major network in Fresno has aired the 30-second commercials created by the Foundation.

• Firefighters reached residents through their Web site and media interviews, again in Spanish and English.

“We had the chance to really get to know the people we serve face to face. We’ve gained trust and respect in the community, and done something really proactive from a safety standpoint,” said Jerry Smith, President of Local 753.

Prior to this, Fresno Firefighters participated in the Disaster Planning for the Elderly campaign, which was sponsored by Firefighters On Your Side. Each year, the Foundation adds additional topics and languages to its program offering.

If your local is interested in participating in the Foundation’s Firefighters On Your Side program, contact Vanessa Robinson at (916) 921-9111 or vrobinson@cpf.org. For more information, visit www.firefightersonyourside.org or www.bomberosatulado.org.

Daniel A. Terry Scholarship Eases Burden of College Tuition

ith the rising costs of tuition, students across the state are finding it more difficult to afford a college education.

The Daniel A. Terry Scholarship helps to ease this burden for children, whose parent was a California firefighter whose name appears on the California Firefighters Memorial Wall.

Named after the founder of the California Fire Foundation and President Emeritus of California Professional Firefighters, the Daniel A. Terry Scholarship has awarded scholarships to 17 students since the program started in 2006.

The 2010 scholarship applications will be sent to all local unions, departments, firefighter organizations and families of fallen firefighters at the end of April. Recipients will be given a $2,000 scholarship award. The closing date to receive completed applications is June 4, 2010.

“Without this scholarship, I don’t know if I would have been able to follow my dreams of being the first in my family to go to college,” said Heather Yonan, a 2009 Daniel A. Terry Scholarship recipient. “Obtaining higher education is such a financial struggle. I am so thankful for this opportunity.”

Firefighters Attend MDA ‘Boot Camp’

Fill the Boot Campaign gives Hope and Help

Thank you to all who attended the annual MDA “Boot Camps” in Southern and Northern California. Departments from across the state came together to share best practices to ensure that the 2010 Fill the Boot Campaign is a huge success. CPF President Lou Paulson encouraged firefighters to support MDA and to continue filling their boots for the worthwhile cause.

“California firefighters are extremely proud of the money we’ve raised for families affected by these devastating diseases,” said President Paulson. “We will continue to support MDA until cures and effective treatments are found.”

Southern California Boot Camp

Attendees met some of the families who are directly affected by the funds raised by California firefighters including Phil Kelleher, former CAL FIRE Local 2881 firefighter, who is now battling ALS (Lou Gehrig’s disease) and Ashley Garcia, a 14-year-old girl with neuromuscular disease.

“You guys go out there and save lives each and every day but when you go out there and fill the boot you save one of our lives,” said Garcia, who thanked the firefighters for their support.

Several Southern California departments received awards at Boot Camp for their tremendous efforts in 2009. Congratulations to the following locals:

- Most Dollars Raised (700+ members): Los Angeles County Firefighters Local 1014
- Most Dollars Raised (101-699 members): Ventura County Professional Firefighters Association Local 1364
- Most Dollars Raised (100 or less members): Upland Professional Firefighters Local 3477
- Top Dollars Raised by a Member: $1,525.73 per member - Upland Professional Firefighters Local 3477
- Most Improved Over Previous Year: CAL FIRE Local 2881
- Southern California Rookie of the Year: Long Beach Firefighters Local 372

Northern California Boot Camp

Firefighters had the opportunity to meet MDA California State Goodwill Ambassador Calum Cain, a 9-year-old boy with Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy. Cain thanked the firefighters for all they do for MDA families. Northern California locals celebrated a significant increase in dollars raised over last year. Congratulations to the following locals:

- Most Dollars Raised: CAL FIRE Local 2881
- Northern California Rookie of the Year: Contra Costa County Professional Firefighters Local 1230
- Honorable Mentions: San Mateo County Firefighters Local 2400, Stockton Firefighters Local 456 and Marin Professional Firefighters Local 1775

Thank you to all locals who participated! A special thank you to Continental Airlines for awarding roundtrip tickets to the top raising departments throughout California!

Abby Umali, the 10-year-old MDA National Goodwill Ambassador, said it best.

“Without you, MDA couldn’t do what it does, and that is to give help to kids and adults with muscular dystrophy like me,” said Umali. “I hope you all know how much hope you’re giving to all of us.”

Thank you, California firefighters! Because of you, the families served by MDA have hope. Best wishes for a safe and successful 2010.
Firefighters Encouraged to Record Their Exposures

Through aggressive lobbying by CPF, California firefighters are now protected by some of the strongest firefighter presumption laws in the nation.

But firefighters still need proof of exposures!

All of the presumptions in statute are disputable, which means that firefighters need evidence that an illness resulted on the job. It can mean all the difference in a workers’ compensation claim.

“It’s vastly easier to make your case if you have kept extensive records of your exposures,” said Tom Bowen, attorney with Davis, Cowell and Bowe, who has represented firefighters in presumption cases. “And if you were at a fire -- any fire -- you were exposed.”

So how do firefighters put their exposures on the record?

For the past 25 years, the Personal Exposure Reporting (PER) program has been helping firefighters report their exposures safely and securely. For $15 a year, firefighters have unlimited access to PER’s unique exposure reporting form, which automates the sometimes time-consuming paper filing process. It’s a firefighter’s best line of defense.

“I’ve seen too many cases where a firefighter does not get workers’ comp or a firefighter’s family does not get the death benefits that they deserve because there weren’t any exposure records to support their case,” said Mike Dubron, president and founder of the Firefighter Cancer Support Network, who recorded his exposures prior to his cancer diagnosis.

Dubron recommends that firefighters consider reporting exposures a vital part of their job. “The few minutes that a firefighter spends reporting their exposures are just as important as putting on turnouts before battling a blaze. They both serve to protect the firefighter,” Dubron said.

For more information about PER, visit www.peronline.org, call (916) 921-9111 or email PER@cpf.org. For more information about the Firefighter Cancer Support Network, visit www.firefightercancersupport.org.

As a firefighter, you are frequently exposed to a broad range of environmental and biological toxins, which put you at greater risk of contracting cancer, tuberculosis, blood-borne and other contagious diseases. Several of California’s presumption laws require that firefighters document occupational exposures to hazardous agents.

In short, you need proof!

The Personal Exposure Reporting (PER) program keeps track of all of the exposures you report. It’s a safe and secure way to protect yourself!

For more information, visit www.peronline.org call (916) 921-9111 or e-mail PER@cpf.org.
Located in Southern El Dorado County, the Pioneer Fire Protection District serves a 296-square mile area including the growing community of Somerset and its surroundings. Six fire stations serve approximately 8,000 residents and averages 780 calls each year, including medical calls, structure fires, vehicle accidents, water rescue and Haz Mat.

Pioneer Professional Firefighters Local 4586 joined the IAFF in December of 2007 and became a proud member of CPF two years later.

"Since we are a small employee group with limited funds and resources, we decided that joining the CPF would be a good way to increase our options for assistance," said Pioneer Union Fire Fighters President Jack Daniels.

Like many departments up and down the state, the Pioneer Fire Protection District has been threatened with budget cuts. Their department receives a quarter of its funding from El Dorado County in the form of an Augmentation Fund, which is at risk of being eliminated. Without this funding, the department is in jeopardy of losing their full-time ALS staffing.

The local also continues to face challenges from a very anti-paid firefighter board of directors. The board opposes their 2% at 55 PERS plan, even though the local has given up two pay increases and accepted a sub par medical plan.

The local’s current goals include gearing up for elections to put pro-firefighter candidates on the board, obtaining a good retirement plan and medical plan for its staff and continuing to deliver a high level of professional service to its community.
City of Coronado’s Prudent Approach Benefits Firefighters

Coronado firefighters have done well despite the current economic climate. They are currently in a three-year contract, which includes raises and the 3% at 50 retirement formula.

The local has benefited greatly from the City of Coronado’s aggressive approach to savings. When their CalPERS account became superfunded in the 1990s and the City of Coronado no longer needed to contribute 9%, the city redistributed that money back into their daily budget. By banking this money, they built a strong reserve, which has been crucial these past two years as revenues have fallen.

The local has also become more involved in political action and has forged an excellent relationship with their mayor and city council, which has paid dividends.

“We have a fair contract. They’ve honored both sides of our MOU and we appreciate their support,” said Coronado Firefighters President Kevin Roof.

Local 3734 Helps City, Raises Political Capital

Despite the current economic downturn, the city of Newport Beach is still financially secure. However, Newport Beach Firefighters Local 3734 has made concessions now to help raise their political capital for the future.

The terms of their contract included:
- A one-year extension to their existing contract
- Implementing a 48/96 trial period
- Paying a portion of their PERS. The local was due a 3½% raise. Instead, they funneled that into their PERS so the city pays 3½% to PERS and members do not pay out-of-pocket.
- Any new hires after March 2010 would pay the full 9% of PERS for their first five years of employment, then they would drop back to paying 3½% after the five years. This helped the local stave off the two-tiered retirement system. Employees still get 3% at 50. They just need to invest more on the front end.

“We’ve had nothing but positive feedback from the city and our council. The city is using us as an example of an organization that has been making compromises and helping the city during this economic downturn. In the end, we hope to see some positive in the future,” said Local 3734 President Chad Ponegalek.

Former Local President Becomes Ontario City Manager

It’s virtually unheard of. But in the city of Ontario, Chris Hughes has moved up the ranks from local union president to deputy fire chief to fire chief to his latest position: city manager.

Hughes was appointed city manager of Ontario by the mayor and city council in February. He brings with him this most unusual career path and over 20 years of service to the City of Ontario.

“He’s a great supporter of the fire service, of our fire department and a good employee,” said Ontario Professional Firefighters Local 1430 President Ryan Lewis. “He’s going to be a great city manager.”

Local 1430 is currently in a contract so hasn’t been in talks with Hughes yet, but they have worked with Hughes in many joint labor-management projects when he was fire chief and have been duly impressed.

“I haven’t heard of something like this happening in this area but we are very happy,” said Lewis.

Tough Times Across the Political Spectrum

Locals across the state are facing tough times, regardless of where their city falls on the political spectrum.

But it has been especially trying for locals in areas that have been traditionally anti-union territory.

Bakersfield City Firefighters Local 246 is currently being threatened with staffing reductions, brownouts and a change of retirement from 3% at 50 to 3% at 55. In the best of times, the department’s growth has been stymied, despite the growth of its population and city limits. For years, there have been no new hires, no pay raises and their stations do not meet the 4-0 staffing standards called for by NFPA.

And things are likely going to get worse before they get better. Local 246 has been in negotiations since their contract ended in March 2008 and has been unable to come to an agreement with the city. The city’s latest threat is to take all staffing language from the contract, which would mean that firefighters would either have to brown out a station that is not fully staffed or run with a two-man station.

“We haven’t grown like everyone else has. The city is saying we need to feel the pain like other city agencies but we’ve been feeling the pain for the last 20 years,” said Bakersfield City President Bob Molton.

But it’s not only locals in anti-union areas that are feeling the pinch. Locals in traditionally progressive areas are also getting hammered.

“I know it’s turned from sporadic pension battles in anti-labor areas to a fight for staffing and benefits in all areas up and down the state. We’re dealing with it, too,” said Santa Barbara City Firefighters President Jon Turner.

Santa Barbara City Firefighters Local 525 has already deferred raises but the city is asking for further concessions. They’ve been successful in fending off brownouts until now, but expect to roll up their sleeves and fight harder in July, when the city needs to close a $2.1 million shortfall.

In Montebello, a suburb of Los Angeles, public sentiment towards firefighters and labor is good, but the city has been relentless in their demands for concessions.

Daily staffing has gone from 18 to 16 and the city has its sights on getting rid of minimum staffing to reduce it further. With staff reductions, one of the department’s ladder trucks has been eliminated. And the cuts keep coming.

By July, Montebello firefighters will most likely be paying 9% of PERS, with no city contribution and the city is also exploring a two-tiered retirement system for new hires.

“The public doesn’t know about these cuts, but they will soon. We’re going to be passing out flyers and walking precincts in the next couple of weeks,” said Local 3821 President Craig Barker.

Santa Barbara County FFs Support Fellow FF

When a firefighter gets sick, their firefighter family rallies to support them. Such has been the case for Santa Barbara County firefighter Tyler Gilliam, who was diagnosed with testicular cancer in February of 2009.

Members of Local 2046 have donated their vacation time to him, shaved their heads and brought meals to his home for weeks after his surgery. Through their Benevolent Foundation, they covered the costs of travel and expenses for his family to visit him at his UCLA hospital room. They even voted online in droves when Gilliam and his fiancée were finalists in the Southern California Dream Wedding Giveaway (and netted the most votes, even though they were not ultimately selected by the sponsor judges for the final prize).

But perhaps the most moving show of solidarity can be seen in "Run to Tyler," a short video that documents the three-day run that Local 2046 members made from Gilliam’s home in Santa Barbara to his UCLA hospital room to surprise him. The video can be seen at http://vimeo.com/9473769.

Tyler is one of three firefighters from Local 2046, who has been stricken with work-related cancer recently.

“It’s been a trying time for our fire family and brings to light how we all need to do a little bit extra to help each other out,” said Santa Barbara County Firefighters President Rob Heckman. “Tyler got work-related cancer at just 33 years of age. We are criticized for having a reasonable retirement and a fair wage, but I don’t think we’re asking too much when work-related cancer can strike any of us.”

Local 4403 Provides Real Scoop About Unions

Arroyo Grande residents got the real scoop about organized labor recently when Professional Firefighters Local 4403 joined other area unions in hosting a free ice cream event for the public at Doc Burnstein’s Ice Cream Lab.

Carpenters Local 150, a builder’s group that has disassociated itself from the AFL-CIO, has targeted the beloved ice cream parlor, picketing and barring the site for several months and intimidating its visitors.

Local 522 Member to Help Repair Haitian Boy’s Heart

Sacramento Metro fire captain and Local 522 member Barbie Law knows how to mend a broken heart.

In the aftermath of the earthquake in Haiti, Law volunteered as a medical relief worker with the non-profit humanitarian agency, Relief International. It was here that she first met seven-year-old Lovensky Alexandre.

Alexandre suffered from a congenital heart defect, which limited his ability to run and play like other children. He took heart medication to combat the chest pains, but his mother was hoping for a surgical solution—something that was not readily available in Haiti.

With the arrival of the American clinic where Law was volunteering, Alexandre’s mother, Roseline Ducelus, saw new opportunity and new hope. On their first two visits, the clinic was still in its emergency start-up phase and could not provide any assistance to Alexandre. Law wanted to help, but didn’t have the tools to do so.

At least not in earthquake-torn Haiti.

Law consulted her father, a practicing physician in Sacramento, and asked if any of his colleagues could help. The first cardiologist her father approached agreed to review Alexandre’s records. With his particular heart defect, Alexandre would have a shortened life expectancy and would be required to take medication for the rest of his life. A fairly routine surgery could repair the defect and allow him to live a normal life. Doctors at Sutter Medical Center in Sacramento offered to perform the life-saving heart surgery for free and cover all expenses, including his hospital stay. It was an offer that Alexandre couldn’t refuse.

Law spent the next month, applying for Haitian passports and arranging air travel. The biggest hurdle was obtaining the travel visas since the U.S. Embassy in Port-Au-Prince isn’t processing tourism or medical visas at this time. It seemed all hope was lost until she heard about U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services and applied for humanitarian parole, which was granted.

“I’ve never done anything like this before but managed to achieve a lot for this little boy in a short time,” said Law.

In late March, Law flew back to Haiti to pick up Alexandre and Ducelus and escort them to the Sacramento area, where they stayed with the family of Haitian expatriate Pierre LaGuerre, who is supervisor of business services for Sutter General Hospital and also a French and Creole interpreter at the hospital.

Alexandre would have a shortened life with a staph infection, contracted while living on the streets of Haiti. His surgery has been re-scheduled for mid-April. If all things go as planned, Alexandre will have a heart that is good as new.

“I saw so much suffering in Haiti. There was so much that was wrong there that I was helpless to make right. This was one thing that I could do,” Law said.

More Bad News for Salinas

Salinas’ budget shortfall for 2010-2011 is nearing $10.3 million and the city just got more bad news: Property tax was greatly underestimated so now they are an additional $2.2 million short.

Prior to this news, six firefighter jobs were on the chopping block. Three of these positions will be reduced through attrition since two firefighters retired last year and one retired this year. The fourth job in jeopardy was spared when Local 1270 President Steve Furtado put himself on the line to help his firefighter brother.

“I've put in my retirement notice,” said Furtado, who plans to continue to serve as president of Salinas Fire Fighters Local 1270 until his term ends in August of 2011, “I’ve decided to go, rather than see another firefighter lose a job.”

Now with the additional property tax shortfall, layoffs may be back on the table, as the city plans to make deeper cuts than previously expected.

Local 1270 may be moving to constant staffing, a model that would increase staffing and put another truck in service, while decreasing expenditures. Currently, Salinas firefighters don’t always make an eight-minute response time. Putting another truck in service would help them better serve their population, which is spread over 25 square miles.

But that still not enough. At the time of this publication, Furtado is evaluating other options.
Hayward Firefighters Add BCs to Bargaining Unit

Hayward’s front line firefighters and battalion chiefs are now represented by the same bargaining unit under Local 1909. The change, which took effect in February, has been an idea long in the making. Former local presidents Garrett Conteras and Eric Vollmer were both active proponents of this when they were in office.

“We have a great relationship with both our command staff and the city and knew that they would be open to the idea,” said Hayward Firefighters President Jason Livermore. “We wanted to have everyone that works on a 24-hour shift to be under the same bargaining unit since we’re all in the firehouse together, work the same schedule and respond to the same emergencies.”

Hayward battalion chiefs were previously part of their own separate bargaining unit, which was a management unit alongside two deputy chiefs. The BCs voted unanimously to join Local 1909. Members of Local 1909 also supported the idea. It required a two-thirds vote of the membership to pursue and they got it.

“We got the votes because our members understand the importance of organizing and growing our membership and having all of us that live in the firehouse every day under one bargaining unit,” said Livermore.

From there, the local approached Hayward’s city manager with the proposal and offered two models to choose from. With the first model, BCs would fall under Local 1909’s current contract and they would add language that speaks to them. With the second option, BCs would keep their current contract and Local 1909 would represent them.

The city manager opted for the second option so now firefighters and BCs have their own contracts but both are represented by Local 1909.

“This doesn’t give us more leverage when bargaining but it does give us another avenue to communicate with BCs,” said Livermore. “We used to have staff meetings to address concerns and ideas. Now we can just speak as union brothers in an informal setting. That’s a big step forward.”

City Manager Groups Call for “Pension Reform”

The Alameda County City Managers Association and the Contra Costa County Public Managers Association have joined forces to push a proposal for a two-tiered retirement system for public employees in Alameda and Contra Costa Counties.

Guided by concepts from the League of California Cities, the two groups have created a pension reform task force that is working to strip down the current ‘defined benefit’ plan that has worked for public employees for decades. Under this plan, all employees would be required to fund a portion of their pensions through direct payroll contributions. The plan would also implement a two-tiered retirement system for new employees that would include 2% at 50 for public safety employees. Currently, public safety employees have a 3% at 50 plan in Alameda and Contra Costa Counties.

In addition, both city manager groups are working with the League of California Cities to call for legislative pension reform at the state level.

“What’s most upsetting to me is the list of city managers who are a part of the task force. Three city managers from our consolidated department are on the task force,” said John Torres, President of the Alameda County Firefighters Association Local 55. Torres found out about the pension reform task force when he received an email with the proposal document from a concerned retiree. “I’m talking with our city managers and they’re telling us, ‘I can’t believe the county is after your pensions’ and then I find out they’re all sitting on this task force.”

In response, Torres and all of the local union leaders from Alameda County have formed the Alameda County Labor Group, a coalition which is currently working on sending a clear message about retirement security to all county residents through a mailer. The group has also enlisted the help of FireStar Productions to produce a video that combines two elements: Alameda County’s last Fire Ops 101, which many of their politicians participated in and CPF Firevision’s report on what’s at stake in the current debate over retirement security. The group will be mailing this video to their key policymakers, local politicians and stakeholders.

‘Every Second Counts’ in San Jose

It’s never been so important for politicians and the public to understand what firefighters do and video is an effective medium to tell that story.

San Jose Firefighters Local 230 utilized help from FireStar Productions to put together a 10-minute video called ‘Every Second Counts.’ The video powerfully illustrates the city’s current staffing numbers, what it provides and what happens when cuts are made. It has been shown as an educational tool to council members and community groups and the results speak for themselves: Council members unanimously voted down a proposal to close two fire stations in San Jose.
This year has been incredibly tough on the fire service and the labor movement in general.

Station closures, brownouts and the loss of jobs have been management’s answer to surviving this economic crisis, often putting the public and our members in harm’s way, casting aside common sense in order to meet the bottom line. Our members have not wavered in their commitment and devotion to the public we serve or to our brothers and sisters riding the rigs. The pundits and politicos who attack us by saying our negotiated benefits are too costly or exorbitant forget that these benefits were not given out of the kindness of our hearts. Locals bargained in good faith, giving back, conceding, offering ideas and real solutions in an effort to help to stem the downward economic spiral we have found ourselves in.

I am confident that by remaining focused on what we as a union do best – staying committed to fair wages, hours, working conditions, and the safety and health of our members and their families -- we, too, shall weather this crisis.

Local F-145 is Abolished

It is the end of an era. Sadly, we say goodbye to Local F-145, Presidio San Francisco. The Presidio Fire Department has been abolished and fire protection will be contracted to the City and County of San Francisco. Regrettably, only 15 CPF members will be offered jobs, leaving 19 members unemployed. CPF, as well as the California Fire Fighter Joint Apprenticeship Committee (CFFJAC) is assisting by adding these members to the Displaced Firefighter List, managed by the CFFJAC. Please contact the CFFJAC if your agency has openings.

IAFF Legislative Conference Update

The IAFF’s Alfred K. Whitehead Legislative Conference was a resounding success. Visiting Washington, DC, during the week of the healthcare vote, was exciting, to say the least.

Our proposed legislation -- the most ever introduced on behalf of federal firefighters -- was lobbied by the amazing contingent of CPF members. Thank you to all who lobbied, wrote letters or made phone calls. Your voice was heard and the feedback I am receiving is encouraging.

Members from CAL FIRE Local 2881 and I had an incredible opportunity to meet with USDA Secretary Vilsack’s office. We gave candid insight into the dangers of the increased use of contractors, the deplorable pay and poor benefits of wildland firefighters and the need for further cooperation between the USFS and our federal, state, county and municipal agencies. The IAFF and CPF look forward to strengthening this partnership and providing direct input, which will ultimately keep the public and our members safe.

Stay safe and see you in San Diego!

CPF Convention Nears

Convention is rapidly approaching and I look forward to another successful convention. As you know, our biennial convention provides direction to the CPF Executive Board, setting our agenda and priorities for the future. I expect that hard work, communication and diligence will be our guiding principles during convention.

Mike Massone, center, along with CAL FIRE members Paul Van Gerwen, Bob Wolf, Ray Snodgrass and Rick Swan speak to Agriculture Secretary Vilsack’s staff regarding USFS firefighters at the IAFF Legislative Conference.
Funding Battles Continue

Legislators from both parties have been looking for innovative ways to generate money for state firefighters, in general, and CAL FIRE firefighters, in particular.

Initially, in order to meet the statewide demand for revenues, we focused on the Emergency Response Initiative (ERI), which would levy a 4.8% assessment on all homeowner’s policies. The fund would not be subject to Prop. 18 and would be funneled into state and local fire agencies to pay for mutual aid services. However, Legislative Council has opined that the fee is, in reality, a tax and fails to provide the appropriate nexus between the costs being levied and the services being delivered. If this opinion holds, the measure would require a two-thirds vote – a tougher hill to climb. But the bottom line is clear: California needs to do something to shore up a system that is our state’s best response to the disasters we know are coming.

The state Legislative Analyst’s Office (LAO) has always had a suggestion of its own. They believe it makes greater sense to have a State Responsibility Area (SRA) fee that is specific to only those property owners who live in SRAs.

Of course, their idea also has unique problems. First, it becomes extraordinarily difficult to figure out what the assessment fees are for those individuals with expensive homes in the resort areas, as opposed to cattle ranchers in the northern counties. How do we fairly assess the nexus that exists between the fee and the service?

CDF Firefighters Local 2881 also contends that such a proposal would make it very difficult for rural agencies to pay their bills or successfully pass a property assessment in their own areas.

Of course, these issues will continue as long as the budget difficulties remain. The good news is that our state revenues are $2 billion dollars greater than anticipated. This means we are only $18 billion in debt.

Bargaining

There are 22 bargaining units in California and 21 of them are without contracts. We are one of those units. CDF Firefighters continues to meet with the Department of Personnel Administration (DPA) and is hopeful that a reasonable contract can be reached. Not unlike our brothers and sisters in the International Association of Fire Fighters (IAFF) and California Professional Firefighters, the unrelenting focus on pensions and benefits makes the challenge of finding a resolution more complex.

We do believe that the general public understands the unique challenges of public safety. While we are obviously willing to make concessions regarding spiking, it is clear that what firefighters do on a daily basis separates us from other employees.

The “Ready, Set, Go!” Program

We were pleased to work with both the IAFF and CPF to help put together a model that educates homeowners about the importance of preparation and to listen to firefighters during an emergency. The overall policy emphasized that public safety belongs in the hands of professionals and I have no doubt that it has saved lives.

I am especially pleased that the Stay and Defend policy, which proved so disastrous in Australia, will absolutely not be a part of any kind of planning program in California.

At the end of day, we do our best to work with legislators and legislative staff to delineate a cost-benefit appraisal for CAL FIRE that is fair and sensible, but mostly we remember that, as firefighters, our ultimate responsibility is to protect the people of California.

I am proud of all of my brothers and sisters in our profession. Even in the difficult times, I look forward to working closely with you.
As we prepare for CPF Convention, Local 1014 is in the midst of a very important vote and balloting process. This is not an election. This vote is an investment in our future.

Local 1014’s Executive Board is asking its membership to vote on a dues increase from 1% of top step firefighter to 1.33% of top step firefighter. At a time when the economic environment is tough and it would seem to be a poor time to raise dues, we feel there can be no more important time to fund the battle to protect everything we have worked so hard to achieve over the years.

We are taking the bold step to increase our dues to further fund our very strong and pro-active political action program. Our political action program is critical to our strength and voice in protecting and advancing any aspect of our wages, benefits, healthcare and working conditions.

We serve 58 cities and the unincorporated areas of Los Angeles County with 165 fire stations. These cities require an enormous amount of political action to elect responsible officials, who will put public safety first and work to keep staffing levels where they belong.

We continue our efforts in the Cities of El Monte and Pomona to help stabilize their budgets and protect our staffing. Other cities have expressed interest in contracting with the County for Fire and Paramedic Protection. As always, we evaluate each request from a union, business and political perspective.

First, it must be the wish and will of the IAFF local affiliate providing the service to the area or region that is requesting the service analysis. Without that, any consideration to an annexation is dead in the water and not open for discussion and we will use our power to kill it. Next, the city must have the financial health and wherewithal to pay their fire protection costs for our service. Last, we look at the “votes” and the “voice” of the elected officials and the citizens. Without the “votes,” you got nothing … no deal.

Some cities of interest that may be seeking County Fire Analysis are Brea, El Segundo, Monterey Park, Montebello, West Covina and Vernon. Needless to say, given the economy and the budget, we will be moving cautiously and carefully with each city to ensure a good fit for all. We will keep you posted.

The end of last year had Los Angeles County Fire Fighters, along with many firefighters throughout the state, fighting one of the largest wildland fires in history – The Station Fire – where we lost two of our own, brothers Ted Hall and Arnie Quinones. Firefighters from throughout the nation and CPF rallied and helped us do the right thing to lay them to rest and we, again, thank all of you and remember all the others who have made the ultimate sacrifice … they shall not be forgotten.

We rose up and fought off the massive flooding conditions that occurred immediately after the Station Fire and saved countless homes and businesses once again in that region. Just when we thought we got a handle on things in our own county, Local 1014 members were called upon to travel to Haiti to help rescue and treat people who suffered one of the most devastating earthquakes in history.

Our US AID – UASI Task Force II Urban Search and Rescue Team is one of only two teams (Fairfax County, Virginia is the other) to be certified to respond worldwide to disasters of this magnitude. Our USAR team performed to the highest caliber of service in the nation in conditions that were beyond belief. Our pride and thanks to all of our Local 1014 members and the Fairfax County members, who represented us all … a job well done.

We extended our contract for one year in December to protect all of our wages and working conditions until December of 2011 with no takeaways, deferrals or changes to include staffing provisions. We also were fortunate to negotiate and find the funding to actually increase county contributions to our healthcare premiums and provide increased dental and orthodontia benefits, resulting in more money in our members’ pockets.

We are very similar to every other membership and we face all of the same challenges heading into the future. We hope to report that our membership approved the dues increase necessary to protect our pensions, shore up our contract cities, run an initiative to supplement our current special fire tax cap, continue to help elect leaders who will protect and support firefighters and their issues and, in the end, focus back to the whole reason we are in this business … the advancement and protection of our contracts that provide the framework for our wages, benefits and working conditions that we bargain for. Our members deserve nothing less.

President Dave Gillotte (fourth from right) briefs Local 1014’s Executive Board members at the IAFF Legislative Conference.
It’s been a tough year for Los Angeles and Local 112 members. Like so many others, our city is in a fiscal death-spiral that just keeps getting worse and worse. This year’s city budget began with a half-billion dollar shortfall that grew by another $185 million six months into the year. To address the shortfall, every city department got the budget axe at the beginning of the year.

At least 10% was taken from everyone, including the police and fire departments. The LAFD went from a $560 million share of the general fund in F/Y 2008/2009, to a $502 million share this year; $52 million of the LAFD’s cut was taken directly from the payroll accounts of Local 112 members.

Rather than fight for additional funds from the city’s reserves like the police department did, our fire chief developed a plan to save money by reducing emergency-responder daily staffing. His plan – which he called “Modified Coverage” – takes 87 firefighters and paramedics off the streets each day by closing 15 fire companies, nine ambulances, three paramedic supervisors and one battalion command team. It closes these companies on a rotating basis throughout the city.

In the process, it harms the public, endangers firefighters and takes $39 million per year out of the paychecks of Local 112 members.

While Local 112 leadership began waging a battle to end the Modified Coverage Plan, we simultaneously had to start negotiating a new contract: Our old one expired at the beginning of the fiscal year. In spite of our willingness to “share the sacrifice” by accepting the provisions of contracts signed this year with other city unions, the city singled us out and refused to make us the same offer. Instead, they declared impasse just a few months into bargaining, and then refused to negotiate in good faith when a mediator was brought in.

Thankfully, the city’s impasse procedure requires that the sides submit to a “fact-finding” hearing before a neutral third party. The fact-finder’s job is to take testimony and evidence and then write a report intended to facilitate continued bargaining.

Essentially, the process is non-binding arbitration.

Just as we hoped and expected, the fact-finder’s report sided with us. Our old one expired at the beginning of the fiscal year. In spite of our willingness to “share the sacrifice” by accepting the provisions of contracts signed this year with other city unions, the city singled us out and refused to make us the same offer. Instead, they declared impasse just a few months into bargaining, and then refused to negotiate in good faith when a mediator was brought in.

We promised to march on City Hall if the deal went to the full council for approval. In the meantime, we aggressively lobbied individual council members for their support.

Before long, the mayor’s committee realized that we had the votes to succeed. They reconsidered their earlier decision and elected to accept our last offer instead.

Local 112’s perseverance paid off in the fight for a fair contract this year. Now, in the same way, we intend to hang in there and win our fight to reopen closed fire companies, paramedic resources and ambulances.

While the next fiscal year promises to be as much of a challenge as this year, the lesson many Local 112 members just learned is that success against stiff odds is possible when firefighters ignore the voices of the selfish few among us, and choose instead to stick together and fight for what is fair and just.
when Larkspur fire captains Matt Cobb and Jim Clark saw the horrifying images of suffering coming out of Haiti after the January 12th earthquake, they knew they had to do something. What they didn’t know was that, right up the road, San Rafael Captain Paul LeVeque – one of their brother firefighters from Local 1775 – was thinking exactly the same thing.

On their own time and their own dime, all three brought their skill, commitment and heart to the citizens of quake-ravaged Haiti. Cobb and Clark spent two weeks on the ground in Port-au-Prince as roving angels of mercy, dispensing random acts of kindness armed with only a duffel full of medical supplies and the desire to make a difference. At almost the same time, LeVeque piloted an airlift of doctors and supplies that helped save lives in a remote, little-noticed corner of the quake-ravaged island.

“When these things happen, a lot of us just want to be there and contribute,” said Clark.

Cobb and Clark developed their plan over a series of phone calls in the days after the quake. Clark, who had traveled to Asia in 2004 to help victims of the massive Indian Ocean tsunami, had an understanding of what they could and couldn’t do as individuals who weren’t part of the official response. Cobb was just ready to go.

“We realized that we weren’t going to save the world, but to do a little piece, and help a few people along the way,” said Cobb. “It’s just who firefighters are wired … to go and try to do something to address the situation.”

With two weeks vacation and a bag of supplies, the two flew to the Dominican Republic, and crossed the border into Haiti. “We went in cautiously, and it just evolved as we got there,” said Cobb. “We took it one step at a time.”

As EMTs and paramedics, the two were able to provide support for medical personnel, and, on occasion, in-the-field help. For a few days, the pair even volunteered at a field hospital. Mostly, they moved through the streets, offering twenty bucks here, a hundred there and whatever else they could spare to homeless mothers and children in some of the city’s poorest neighborhoods.

“The people had tremendous dignity and, despite the conditions, I found them to be extremely spirited,” said Clark.

Like Cobb, LeVeque jumped at the chance to help, and, like Cobb, he had a partner – his wife Lynda. “When I got off the phone, she just said I’m going.” And I said, ‘OK.”

While Paul was piloting the unique cargo aircraft, Lynda was in charge of gathering whatever supplies the doctors might need to aid in their efforts.

“They didn’t have an autoclave (to sterilize instruments) so Lynda went out and bought a bunch of pressure cookers. We really were the supply line for this area.”

Originally intended as a single trip, the LeVeques wound up making several aerial runs between Florida and Haiti. They had even hoped to airlift out children orphaned by the quake, but were unable to get authorities to sign off on the effort.

“We wish we could have gotten some of the kids out,” said Lynda.

Although the timing of their respective trips overlapped, the two groups never crossed paths, though each knew the other as firefighters back home. Still, each expressed admiration for what the others had done to make a difference.

“What they (the LeVeques) did was phenomenal – a whole different level of giving aid,” said Clark. “I can’t even fly a glider, so I thought it was great.”

“For me, it was no surprise to hear what they (Cobb and Clark) were doing because that’s just who they are,” said LeVeque.

Nearly 100 fire departments in California will be better prepared for a terrorist threat, after sending their training officers and Haz Mat personnel to one of the CFFJAC’s Terrorism Consequence Management (TCM) Train-the-Trainer courses. The CFFJAC has held classes in 11 locations throughout the state over the past year. The one-day course, offered at no cost to the individual or department, provides an overview of TCM standardized protocols, building on the curriculum that was disseminated through the CFFJAC’s 2004 TCM course. The class is designed to prepare the participants to go back to their departments to teach the course at the local level. The TCM class teaches first responders how to recognize chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear and explosive agents and devices and to understand what issues to consider when planning strategies and tactics during a terrorism incident.

“The curriculum offers so many examples of possible threats,” said Russ Fowler, Battalion Chief for CAL FIRE in Butte County, who is a course instructor. “It’s no longer just about the Twin Towers and Oklahoma City. People are seeing that it’s on the home front. It’s happening in their backyard.”

TCM Continuing Education

In addition to the classroom based TCM training, the CFFJAC has been in production on a series of Web Based Training (WBT) modules to help firefighters continue their TCM education. These modules will be available to every fire department in the state and are designed to be taken by individual users online. Modules will include: Chemical Considerations, Biological Considerations, Radiological/Nuclear Considerations, and Evidence and Crime Scene Preservation, to name a few.

“We’re proud that we’ve equipped training officers and Haz Mat personnel throughout the state to prepare our first responders with the knowledge to handle potential terrorist threats,” said CFFJAC Program Director Yvonne de la Peña. “We look forward to launching our first Web Based Training product and trust it will be an extremely beneficial component of our TCM training.”
